

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Let's review!

Learning Outcome

Describe hypothetical situations in written and spoken interactions according to work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- When did you first start driving?
- How did that make you feel?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about friendship, relationships, feelings and reactions.
- I can speculate about the past.
- I can tell stories and anecdotes.

Let's Explore!

Elaine went for her driving exam

* A "driving exam" is a road test where an examiner decides whether or not to give you a permanent driver's license.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Elaine has taken her driving exam twice. During the first test, she forgot to turn on a directional signal. During the second test, she was parking when she realized the space was too small. Since then, Elaine has taken ten additional driving lessons. She has been practicing for weeks. If she hadn't already failed two driving tests, she wouldn't feel so nervous now.

So, here Elaine was, taking her test again. It was torture! The examiner must have known she was nervous, because her hands were shaking. He was sitting calmly, in a blue cardigan, smiling at her. When he spoke, she realized that she may have met him somewhere before.

Elaine knew that he couldn't have been the tester during her previous tests, but who was he? She couldn't place his voice. Where could she have heard it before? She might have heard in him in the testing office the last time, she decided.

Elaine didn't have any more time to pay attention to the tester. She started up the car and then she was concentrating on driving. To her astonishment, she handled the car well and even parked without any problem.

When she stepped out of the car, the tester smiled again and said, "You've passed the test!" She was stunned!

When she got home, she turned on the TV. An advertisement for safe driving she had seen countless times was on. She recognized the voice. The "safe driver" sitting behind the wheel in the advertisement was her tester.

Let's Practice!

Elaine had a great experience in the driving test.

Instructions: Circle the words that don't fit the meaning of what's being said in the paragraph.

So, here Elaine was, taking her test again. It was tortoise! The examiner must have known she was nerving, because her hands were shaking. He was sitting calmly, in a blue card game, smiling at her. When he spoke, she realizing that she may have met him somewhere before. Elaine didn't have any more time to pay attentive to the tester. She started out the car and then she was concentrating on driving. To her atonement, she handled the car well and even parked without any problem.

Let's Practice!

Elaine doesn't remember where she knows the tester from.

Instructions: Match the two parts of the sentences from Column A to Column B.

COLUMN A

1. The examiner must have known she
2. She realized that she may have met
3. Elaine knew that he couldn't have been
4. She couldn't place his voice.
5. She might have heard him in

COLUMN B

- a. could she have heard it before?
- b. was nervous, because her hands were shaking.
- c. the testing office the last time, she decided.
- d. the tester during her previous tests.
- e. him somewhere before.

Extension Activity

Talk about a test that made you nervous.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Ask and answer questions about a test that made you nervous.
- Write wh- questions about being nervous in a test.
- Include questions about what the person felt before, during and after the test.
- When you answer questions, give full descriptions.
- Speculate about why you felt that.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I write and ask 6 to 10 questions about a test.

☐
☐

I answer questions giving full answers.

☐
☐

I speculate on why I felt that way at the time.

☐
☐

Target Words

- cardigan (noun): a sweater which fastens at the front with buttons
e.g. He was sitting calmly, in a blue cardigan, smiling at her.
- torture (noun): an unpleasant experience causing mental or physical pain e.g. Elaine was, taking her test again. It was torture!
- to pay attention (expression): to focus on something or someone without distraction
e.g. Elaine didn't have any more time to pay attention to the tester.
- to start up (verb): the act of activating, turning on, or setting in motion e.g. She started up the car and then she was concentrating on driving
- astonishment (noun): a great surprise
e.g. To her astonishment, she handled the car well and even parked without any problem.
- to stun (verb): to shock or surprise a person so much that he or she is unsure how to react e.g. When she stepped out of the car, the tester smiled again and said, "You've passed the test!" She was stunned!
- honestly (adverb): used to emphasize that you are telling the truth
e.g. Honestly, if had known from the beginning it could turn out well, I would have been stunned.

Learning Points

Speculation About the Past

You can use modals to talk about degrees of certainty and speculate about things in the past.

You use them to describe what is definite, probable, possible, or impossible from the speaker's point of view.

You can use must, may, might, and could to describe degrees of certainty.

You can use modals with the Present Perfect to talk about the possibility of a past event that is not clear in the present context.

Example:

The examiner must have known she was nervous, because her hands were shaking.

Look at the chart for the meanings of modals when speculating about the past:

Modal Phrase	Meaning
Must have	It is very likely
May have Might have Could have	It is possible

- May have has a slightly stronger meaning than might have or could have.
- You can add not to make a negative speculation (It may not have been true).

Examples:

- The examiner must have known she was nervous, because her hands were shaking.
- When he spoke, she realized that she may have met him somewhere before.
- Elaine knew that he couldn't have been the tester during her previous tests, but who was he?
- Where could she have heard it before?
- She might have heard him in the testing office the last time, she decided.

Learning Points

Talking About the Past: The Simple Past, The Present Perfect and the Past Continuous Tenses

When you tell stories and anecdotes, it is common to use a mixture of tenses. This allows you to convey a variety of timelines and action sequences.

You use the Simple Past tense to talk about many kinds of past events: short, quickly finished actions, longer situations and repeated events.

For example:

*During the first test, she forgot to turn on a directional signal.
She started up the car.*

You use the Present Perfect tense to talk about a past action or an action that began in the past that is connected to the present in some way. It is common to use for and since when referring to time periods in the Present Perfect.

For example:

Elaine has taken her driving exam twice. Since then, Elaine has taken ten additional driving lessons.

You use the Past Continuous tense to talk about an action that was happening at a time before now and to describe the background in a story written in the past tense.

For example:

*During the second test, she was parking when she realized the space was too small.
She was concentrating on driving.*

