Let's Start!

Little sisters can drive you crazy!

Learning Outcome

Describe hypothetical situations in written and spoken interactions according to work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- When do your younger sisters and/or brothers annoy you?
- If you are the youngest, how did you annoy your older sisters and brothers?
- When do brothers and sister stop being annoying?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about friendship, relationships, feelings and reactions.
- I can talk about hypothetical situations in the past.
- I can speculate about the past.

Let's Explore!

Tara could try anyone's patience!

* When someone "tries your patience" they test your tolerance.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

You might have dealt with a younger sister. If you did, you may have had an experience similar to the one I had. My sister could have tried anyone's patience at times. Tara loved to play the "What would you have done if ... " game.

She must have asked me a million questions over the years. One of her favorite questions was, "If you had won a million dollars last year, where would you have gone?" Another she loved to ask is, "What would you have done if the president had asked you to go to the moon? What would you have taken with you?" At least once a week she asked me, "If you could have gotten anything for your birthday, what would you have asked for?" Every once in a while, she came up with a startling question like, "If the president had asked you for advice, what would you have said to him? If a thief had held you up, would you have given him your money?"

I thought I must have heard them all over the years. However, to my astonishment she looked sheepishly down at the table one night and whispered apprehensively, "What would you have done if you had found out your little sister had broken your laptop?" I was speechless.

Let's Practice!

Tara explains how to tell a story.

Instructions: Match the two parts of the sentences from Column A to Column B.

COLUMN A

1. The person telling the story suggests we
2. That person says that we may
3. The person tells the story of how Tara could
4. The person considers Tara must have
5. The person must

COLUMN B

- a. have tried anyone's patience at times.
- b. have had an experience similar to the one she had.
- c. asked her a million questions over the years.
- d. have heard all of Tara's questions over the years.
- e. might have dealt with a younger sister.

Let's Practice!

Do you remember Tara's "What would you have done if ..." questions?

Instructions: Read the sentences. Write the missing words. Use what, asked, given, done, gone, found, said, told, won, and held.

1. If you had _____ a million dollars last year, where would you have _____?
2. What would you have _____ if the president had _____ you to go to the moon?
3. If the president had _____ you for advice, what would you have _____ to him?
4. If a thief had _____ you up, would you have _____ him your money?
5. _____ would you have done if you had _____ out your little sister had broken your laptop?

Extension Activity

Talk about annoying siblings.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Think of ways siblings can be annoying.
- On 10 cards, write sentences saying what a sibling did (My younger sister used my new makeup to paint a wall.).
- Now use the cards to talk about hypothetical situations in the past (if my younger sister had ...).
- Take your cards to class and trade with another partner.
- Take turns talking about hypothetical situations in the past with the prompts from the cards.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I write sentences on 10 cards saying what a sibling did.

☐ ☐

I practice using the third conditional, say what I would have done in that situation.

☐ ☐

I use the third conditional to say what I would have done in situations my partner has written up.

☐ ☐

Learning Points

The Third Conditional - Talking Hypothetically About the Past

You use the third conditional to talk about unreal situations in the past. These are things that did not happen in the past. You often use the third conditional to speculate about the past.

When you want to talk about situations in the past in a hypothetical context (not real or necessarily true), you can use the structure would have + past participle.

If you had won a million dollars last year, where would you have gone?

Look at the chart below for the structure of the third conditional:

Conditional Name	Structure	Example
Third	If + Past Perfect, would have + past participle	If a thief had held you up, would you have given him your money?

Examples:

- What would you have done if the president had asked you to go to the moon? What would you have taken with you?"
- At least once a week she asked me, "If you could have gotten anything for your birthday, what would you have asked for?"
- "If you had won a million dollars last year, where would you have gone?"
- "If the president had asked you for advice, what would you have said to him?"
- Once she asked me, "If a thief had held you up, would you have given him your money?"
- What would you have done if you had found out your little sister had broken your laptop?

Learning Points

Speculating About the Past

You can use modals to talk about degrees of certainty and speculate about things in the past. You use them to describe what is definite, probable, possible, or impossible from the speaker's point of view.

You can use must, may, might, and could to describe degrees of certainty.

You can use modals with the Present Perfect to talk about the possibility of a past event that is not clear in the present context.

Example:

You might have dealt with a younger sister. If you have, you may have had an experience similar to the one I had.

Look at the chart for the meanings of modals when speculating about the past:

Modal Phrase	Meaning
Must have	It is very likely
May have Might have Could have	It is possible

- May have has a slightly stronger meaning than might have or could have.
- You can add not to make a negative speculation (It may not have been true).

Examples:

- You might have dealt with a younger sister.
- If you had, you may have had an experience similar to the one I had.
- My sister could have tried anyone's patience at times.
- She must have asked me a million questions over the years.
- I thought I must have heard them all over the years.
