

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

It's not easy asking for a raise!

Learning Outcome

Describe situations in written and spoken interactions according to social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- How soon after starting a job do you think someone can ask for a raise?
- How much do you think the raise would be for?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about friendship, relationships, feelings and reactions.
- I can talk about hypothetical situations in the past.
- I can tell stories and anecdotes.

Let's Explore!

Tom kept putting off *asking for a raise!

* When you "put off" doing something, you postpone doing it.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Tom's been an actor with the theater company for two years. He has been a hard worker. He's earned a lot of recognition for his supporting roles. Last month, he decided that the time had come to ask for a leading role. Every morning he decided that he was asking today. Every afternoon he put it off. Finally, Tom went into the production office. He completely forgot what he was planning to say. While he was standing there, frustrated, he blurted out, "I think I deserve a leading role!"

The producer seemed surprised by this unexpected outburst. "Sorry, Tom," he said. "This isn't the right time."

Tom was feeling so distressed that he dashed out of the office. As soon as he stepped out, he regretted saying anything. "If I had prepared more, he would have said yes immediately," Tom thought to himself. "If I had explained why I deserved a lead, he could have considered it. If I hadn't said I deserved it, he may have been more open to the idea".

As the day wore on, Tom got angry. "If I had threatened to quit, he would have changed his tune," Tom muttered to himself. "If I had known how ungrateful he was going to be, I should have just said I'd leave the company." Tom got up with determination and went into the production office again. The producer looked up. He was smiling. "Tom," he said. "I've got time now. You're right, I've been meaning to feature you this season!"

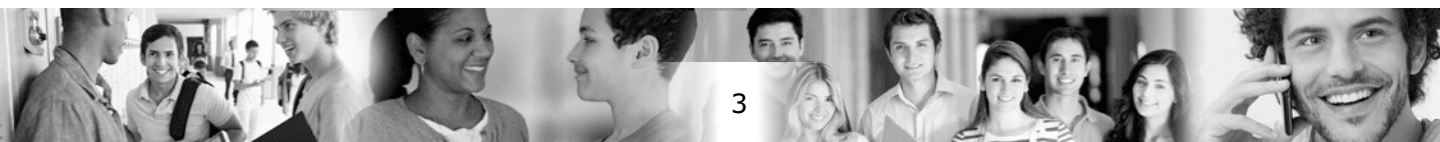

Let's Practice!

Tom has finally pulled himself together*!

* When you "pull yourself together," you become calm again after being angry or upset.

Instructions: Circle the correct option to complete the sentences. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

1. He was feeling _____ because he thought he deserved a leading role.
 - a. frustrated
 - b. surprised
 - c. angry
2. The producer seemed _____ by this unexpected outburst.
 - a. frustrated
 - b. surprised
 - c. angry
3. He dashed out of the office because he was feeling _____.
 - a. surprised
 - b. distressed
 - c. frustrated
4. Tom got _____ as the day wore on.
 - a. surprised
 - b. hungry
 - c. angry
5. Tom was feeling _____ and went into the production office again.
 - a. distressed
 - b. determined
 - c. demonstrative

Let's Practice!

If Tom's boss had had time to speak, Tom wouldn't have jumped the gun*.

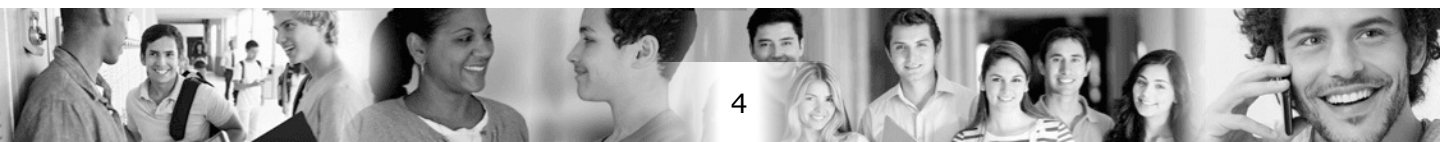

* When you "jump the gun," you do something too soon without thinking carefully about it.

Instructions: Read the sentences. Write the missing phrases. Use the correct option from the Word Bank.

Word Bank

prepared more / have changed / hadn't said / had known / have considered / had explained / had threatened / have been / should have / have said

1. "If I had _____, he would _____ yes immediately," Tom thought to himself.
2. If I _____ why I deserved a lead, he could _____ it.
3. If I _____ I deserved it, he may _____ more open to the idea.
4. As the day wore on, Tom got angry. "If I _____ to quit, he would _____ his tune," Tom muttered to himself.
5. If I _____ how ungrateful he was going to be, I _____ just said I'd leave the company.

Extension Activity

Make up a series of hypothetical statements.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Reread the text paying special attention to the series of hypothetical statements that Tom makes when he is thinking.
- Think of three separate events where an inner dialogue like this might happen to you.
- Write a series of hypothetical statements that are your inner dialogue after the event.
- Read your three series of hypothetical statements to a partner.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I reread the text.

☐ ☐

I think of three events where I might have an inner dialogue using hypothetical statements.

☐ ☐

I write a series of hypothetical statements using the third conditional about three separate events.

☐ ☐

I share my hypothetical statements with a partner.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- to earn (verb): to get something that you deserve, usually because of something good you have done or because of the good qualities you have e.g. He's earned a lot of recognition for his supporting roles.
- the time has come (expression): it is an appropriate time for something to happen
e.g. Last month, he decided that the time had come to ask for a leading role.
- to blurt (verb): to say something suddenly, without thinking of the consequences e.g. He blurted out his thoughts during the meeting.
- outburst (noun): a sudden forceful expression of emotion, usually anger
e.g. The producer seemed surprised by this unexpected outburst.
- to deserve (verb): to have earned or to be given something because of the way you have behaved or the qualities you have e.g. If I had explained why I deserved a lead, he could have considered it.
- to dash (verb): to go somewhere quickly
e.g. Tom was feeling so distressed that he dashed out of the office.
- to threaten (verb): to warn of something unpleasant or unwanted e.g. If I had threatened to quit, he would have changed his tune.
- ungrateful (adjective): not showing or expressing any thanks
e.g. If I had known how ungrateful he was going to be, I would have just said I'd leave the company.

Learning Points

The Third Conditional - Talking Hypothetically About the Past

You use the third conditional to talk about unreal situations in the past. These are things that did not happen in the past. You often use the third conditional to talk about regrets.

When you want to talk about situations in the past in a hypothetical context (not real or necessarily true), you can use the structures would have, should have and could have.

Could have (+ past participle) means that it was possible to do something at a time in the past, or you had the ability to do something, however, you did not do it.

If I had explained why I deserved a lead, he could have considered it.

Should have (+ past participle) means that you had some obligation to do something in the past, or that it may have been a good idea to do something, however, you did not do it. Should have can also express regret about something you did or did not do.

If I had known how ungrateful he was going to be, I should have just said I'd leave the company.

Use would have (+ past participle) to speculate about the past.

If I had prepared more, he would have said yes immediately.

Look at the chart below for the structure of the third conditional:

Conditional Name	Structure	Example
Third	If + Past Perfect, would have + past participle	If I had threatened to quit, he would have changed his tune.

Examples:

- "If I had prepared more, he would have said yes immediately," Tom thought to himself.
- "If I had explained why I deserved a lead, he could have considered it".
- "If I hadn't said I deserved it, he may have been more open to the idea".
- "If I had threatened to quit, he would have changed his tune," Tom muttered to himself.
- "If I had known how ungrateful he was going to be, I should have just said I'd leave the company."

Learning Points

Talking About the Past: The Simple Past, The Present Perfect and the Past Continuous Tenses

When you tell stories and anecdotes, it is common to use a mixture of tenses. This allows you to convey a variety of timelines and action sequences.

You use the Simple Past tense to talk about many different types of events in the past: short, quickly finished actions, longer situations and repeated events.

*Finally, Tom went into the production office.
Last month, he decided that the time had come to ask for a leading role.*

You use the Present Perfect tense to talk about a past action or an action that began in the past that is connected to the present in some way. It is common to use for and since when referring to time periods in the Present Perfect.

*He has been a hard worker.
Tom's been an actor with the theater company for two years.*

You use the Past Continuous tense to talk about an action that was happening at a time before now and to describe the background in a story written in the past tense.

*While he was standing there, frustrated, he blurted out, "I think I deserve a leading role!"
Tom was feeling so distressed that he dashed out of the office.*

Examples:

- Tom's been an actor with the theater company for two years.
- He has been a hard worker.
- While he was standing there, frustrated, he blurted out, "I think I deserve a leading role!"
- He's earned a lot of recognition for his supporting roles.
- Last month, he decided that the time had come to ask for a leading role.
- Every morning he decided that he was asking today. Every afternoon he put it off.
- Finally, Tom went into the production office. He completely forgot what he was planning to say.

